What We Do

STAGE 1 – EXPORT HAULAGE

The movement of items from a shipper's location to the freight forwarders warehouse is called export haulage. This usually requires the help of a truck or train to move them. How long it takes depends on the distance, geographical location and what the items are. This first stage can take anywhere from a few hours to a few weeks in the freight forward process steps. The first step in the freight forwarding process is to transport the cargo to the freight forwarding firm's warehouse

STAGE 2 – ITEMS CHECKPOINT

Immediately following the export haulage stage, freight forwarders receiving the goods and will check to see and ensure everything was transported without incidents

STAGE 3 – EXPORT CUSTOMS CLEARANCE

Before items can be shipped off they require clearance from the country of origin. This process is performed by customs brokers. They are required to submit details about the cargo and any supporting documents that are needed. Usually, an agreement is established between the shipper and consignee who is responsible for this process. If a freight forwarding company does not offer this service, it is required to find a third-party customs broker service

STAGE 4 – IMPORT CUSTOMS CLEARANCE

Once the shipment arrives, authorities in the destination country are required to check import customs documents. The secret to this stage is that it can begin before the cargo even arrives. It is the responsibility of the freight forwarder or nominated customs broker to perform this clearance by the time the cargo arrives

STAGE 5 – DESTINATION ARRIVAL AND HANDLING

This stage involves a number of different processes once the cargo arrives. At this point, freight forwarders will receive all documents for the cargo, including outstanding documentation, carrier bills and more. This process is always taken care of by the freight forwarder
